BOLD ROBBERY OF SHOE STORE NETS THIEVES ABOUT $100.00.

Broke Into Rear of John Irwin's Place and Got Shoes and Cash Worth That Amount.

ROBBERIES ALSO IN NEW HAVEN

Henry Rhodes' House on Main Street Broken Into and Valuable China Taken—Gardens Stripped of Their Green Stuff.

Several robberies were committed last night or early this morning and one of them was especially bold. John Irwin's shoe store on Pittsburgh street was broken into and shoes, cash and stamps worth about $100 were taken. The residence of Henry Rhodes on Main street, New Haven, was also entered and some valuable canine ware was secured. The garden of Kath Walton on Third street, New Haven, was devastated and all of the good green stuff cleared up.

At John Irwin's store the burglars made their visit between the hours of 10 and 1 o'clock and after securing $5 in cash and shoes worth about $6 made their escape. Mr. Irwin left the store at 10 o'clock A. M. and seemed to think he had planned a great feat. The police were called to the house and he was found to be the burglar. He was taken to the police station and held over night.

Richard Keeler, a 19 year old boy of Morgan was before Judge A. O. Solis this morning on a charge of drunkenness. He was quite debauched and seemed to think he had planned a great feat. The police were called to the house and he was found to be the burglar. He was taken to the police station and held over night.

James Connor of Homestead, a simple chanced with being a suspicious character and begging money on the streets was held for 18 hours. He was arrested at the instance of ladies along Broad avenue who reported the case.

Tom McDonald who said that he was on his return to his home after getting a job this morning and readily admitted that he had been on the streets all night. He gave his address as Pittsburgh and Lawrence and was secured $350 a day. The safe was about 30 feet long and was ransacked.

A dollar's worth of postage stamps is also missing. There is no clue to the robbery. The burglars were evidently well acquainted with the place as the only way of gaining an entrance to the rear of the building is from an entrance leading from North Pittsburg street.

At the home of Henry Rhodes in New Haven an entrance was gained through a pantry. The thief or thieves got $2 or $30 worth of decorated chinaware which Mrs. Rhodes had put out in the dining room yesterday afternoon. Nothing else was taken. The robbery is supposed to have occurred about 3 o'clock.

Tables last night or this morning cleaned by the maid of Mrs. Kath Walton on Third street. A fine lot of cabbage corn and tomatoes were taken.

BLACK HAND GAME.

Man Who Was Arrested at Greensburg Makes a Confession to the State Police.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—De-velopments are coming fast following the arrest near Jenkinsburg, Indiana, of the Black Hand Society members, Carl Borsig and Lieutenant Lamb of Troon A State Constabulary yesterday morning secured a confession from Semmie de Gossen, who was arrested soon after he had secured possession of the dummy package of money at the foot of a tree that he played a part in the attempt to extort money from John Albertorff, the wealthy Jeannette contractor. His confession also established the fact that the operations of the Black Hand Society in Western Pennsylvania are directed from the headquarters of the organization in New York. De Gossen said Albertoletti and his family were to be killed if he failed to comply with the demand to place $10,000 at the foot of a tree.

Michael Cunco, the Greensburg merchant, who received a threatening letter several months ago went to the county jail and picked out De Gossen as the Stellian who had come to his store and questioned him concerning the amount of money he had invested in his business. The State Police believe they have captured the entire gang, which has terrorized Greensburg and Jeannette for several months.

NOTES STILL LOST

Which May Seriously Affect Case in Supreme Court.

UNIONTOWN. Sept. 28.—The book containing the court report of the trial of W. L. Cate, convicted of the murder of Pellegrenus Goss at Bellveron, is still missing. There is much speculation as to what will become of the case unless the notes, which are the property of L. L. Miller, are found.

The case has already been appealed to the Supreme Court and it is absolutely necessary that the record of the case go there, but this will be impossible unless the court notes are found.

paper in Fayette County, and it is better distributed for the general advertising than is the only paper that presents it each week.

THE DAILY COURIER fills in the seventh day for the daily editions and with the photographic news of Sunday Journalism. The Daily and Sunday editions cover the advertising field with a circulation ap-proximating over 35,000 weekly.

THE WEEKLY COURIER is the organ of the Connellsville coke trade and one of the best weeklies in Fayette County.

and the Connellsville coke region the most publicity for the best money.

SATURDAY EVE., SEPT. 28, 1907.

THE ONE IDEA MOVEMENT.

The liquor interests of Pennsylvania admit that there is a strong sentiment in favor of the passage of Local Option legislation, but they declare that the sentiment is manufactured, and is not inspired by the business interests.

The statement is perhaps quite accurate in the entirety, and the opposition to spend a large sum of money in a campaign of education against it is legitimate and proper, but if the disseminated information are not costly as those of Fayette county in the recent judicial contest the liquor interests will find that their reported approximation of $7,500,000 will soon look like thirty cents.

The liquor interests think the protection against their business arises from the extension of speakeasies. There are few if any speakeasies in Fayette county, so that the reason would not apply here, nor do we think it applies generally. The chief element of strength in the Local Option sentiment is perhaps one of envy. Under the restricted license laws the liquor business is as it has been highly profitable. Large sums of money have been made in the hotel business in Fayette county, and even greater profits in brewing business. Instead of being manufacturers for the local trade, the breweries have become large retailers themselves. The larger share of the business of many of them is their local trade; but not only their profits but also their methods of distribution have caused the antagonism of many people who begrudge the one and resent the other.

Others still, including the Prohibitionists, generally, see in the traffic nothing but the eternal damnation of manhood. They blame strong drink for all the crime and disorder in the communities in which they live. They persuade themselves that Local Option will be a panacea for all these ills

Experience has demonstrated the folly of this conclusion, but some minds are so limited in their dimensions that there is not room in them for more than one idea at a time. The Prohibitionists and the Local Optionists are large y people of one idea. They are not content to suffer the ills we have,

but they want to fly to others which previous experiences have proven to be worse.

JUSTICE'S GENERAL UTILITY MEN.

When the State Constabulary was first organized the Democratic politicians and the Democratic press denoted the "Constab" as a useless body established for sinister purposes only; but there is reason to believe that the acute anxiety of the Democratic opposition concerning the visibility and tangible and practical employment of this body for the public good has since been relieved.

The troopers have not only presered the peace during strikes and lockouts, but they have done much toward preventing it in other situations and on other occasions. They have everywhere and always proven valuable as assistants and co-workers of the local constabulary. They are ready acting as humane agents and detectives, and have even undertaken the difficult task of compelling autoists to observe the speed laws. They are doing almost everything except as health officers and road supervisors, and it is not at all impossible that they will turn their attention to the se duties when the occasion seems to demand their services.

They are the general utility men of the law's modesty and the community's pride, and they have a record of good and their work, a truly and effective

They have effectively demonstrated the wisdom if not the necessity of their organization. Even the unwilling Democratic organs are now finding some excuse for their existence.

The bootleggers who buy whisky boys are as bad as the men who break gasoline, even though they should not break the law when apprehended and convicted, and it should be the business of the authorities to run them down and run them in.

Somerset county is going to get in to the Good Roads game.

The Gallitzin doctor accused of selling cocaine to Somerset county was his trial has not extended that far. He certainly didn't advertise.

Meyersdale had a real Wild West show up of her own. Some of the actors will have a locking-up in consequence.

Youngstown, O., is a formidable rival of Cumberland, Md., as a cotton green for Fayette county clovers.

An atom of humanity is easily swallowed up in a big city, but the perfect political system of the country, Pittsburg's biggest law librarian will probably be found many hours, if he is not already located before these lines are read their way into print.

The County Detective appointment will not go begging, anyhow.

Robbery is so rampant just now that the garden cabbages do not usually grow.

The Opal Serpent

By FERGUS HUME.

Author of "The Mystery of a Haunted Cabin," "The Mandarin's Fan," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY E. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

The collector changed color again. "I don't understand you."

Paul shrugged his shoulders and rose to go. "For God's sake, Mr. Hurd will open it."

"Push it aside and make for the door."

Push, with his monkey face much perplexed, sat hunched in his chair, biting his fingers. As Paul laid his hand on the knob he called him back.

"I can explain," he said nervously.

"'Not me,'" said Paul coldly.

"I prefer to do so to you," said the lawyer hurriedly.

"To me, too. I don't think I have acted very well toward Miss Norman, and, if you are to marry her, you may be able to arrange."

"To make peace, I suppose you mean?" burst out Beecot. "No, Mr. Push, you have acted like a scoundrel. You left that poor girl in the lurch as soon as you found that Miss Krill was—as you thought—legally entitled to the money."

"What do you mean by blighting her tact?"

"Because you know very well what has been done," retorted Paul. "This winter will be sifted to the bottom. Mr. Paul, by my friend Ford, and if things are as I think they are Miss Krill won't keep that money. You know very well!"

"Miss Norman won't get the money either," snarled Push. "I know that very well. Leastwise," he added, "without my assistance."

"Most of you crooked ways," said Paul indifferently. "Tell what you like to Hurd. I refuse to listen."

As he spoke he opened the door and found himself facing Hurd, who was red and hot. The detective stepped into the office and as he passed Paul whispered, "Hold your tongue about the boy."

Then he turned to Mr. Push. "Well, sir," he puffed, "I have had a job catching up Mr. Beecot. No doubt you know why I have come?"

"'No,'" said Push dryly; "I don't see the point."

"They will keep. I've got him safe under lock and key. Before bringing you face to face with him I thought it best to give you an opportunity of clearing yourself."

"Or what?" asked Push in a brazen manner.

Hurd looked at Beecot, who spoke. "Mr. Push knows very well that Tracy may be given the opal brooch to you. And I believe he does. You would not have taken him into your office—a boy of the streets and with a bad character at that—unless you wanted to bribe him to hold his tongue."

"I had no need to bribe," said Push, gnawing his finger nails and rather cowed by this direct attack. "The boy did show me the opal brooch, and I took it from him to return to Norman."

"I don't know it," said Push as Paul closed the door and returned to his seat.

"Very good," rejoined the detective calmly. "We'll assume for the sake of argument that you did not struggle with Norman."

"That I certainly did not."

"Then you know who did. Come, sit—let's become stern—"The boy Tracy may be given the opal brooch to you. And I believe he does. You would not have taken him into your office—a boy of the streets and with a bad character at that—unless you wanted to bribe him to hold his tongue."

"I had no need to bribe," said Push, gnawing his finger nails and rather cowed by this direct attack. "The boy did show me the opal brooch, and I took it from him to return to Norman."

"When did you receive it?" asked Hurd, pulling out his book. "Be careful, Mr. Push. I'll take down what you say."

"I have nothing to conceal," said Push in quite an unnecessarily injured manner. "I had employed the boy on several errands, and he knew I was Norman's lawyer. On the evening of the 6th of July—"

"And the ending of the murder?" said Hurd.

"'Are you sure of it? The boy told me that Mr. Beecot had met with an accident and that a blue velvet case containing a brooch had fallen out of his pocket."

"It was stolen," said Beecot hastily.

"Tracy was not such a fool as to tell me that," replied the lawyer dryly.

"He said that he picked it up and took it out of the boy's pocket. The boy's grandmother, who is a widow, had wanted to get it and pay for it for drink, but Tracy ran away with it and came to me about 5 o'clock. He gave me the brooch and asked me to take charge of it, as he expected to get money for it from Aaron Norman, who wanted it."

"Tracy overheard my conversation with Norman," said Paul angrily, "and when he heard that the brooch was mine, he said you, Mr. Push."

"Well," said the collector coolly, "what of that? Norman was my client and wanted the brooch. I intended to keep it and then see you, so that a sale might be arranged. Norman spoke to me about the brooch several times and wanted it for reasons you may not know."

"Oh, yes, we know," said Hurd sardonically. "We know that you will give credit for Mr. Push. Well, you know about the jewel later that evening. I suppose you intend to tell us you gave him the brooch then?"

"I intend to tell you nothing of the sort," retorted Push after a few moments' thought. "I see that things are coming to a crisis, and I would like to see Miss Norman reinstated in her rights."

"Oh," said Paul indignantly, "and

The Free
Bridge

Connellsville's Biggest Department Store is only a Block from the Free Bridge.

The free bridge and the Wright-Metzler Store are objects of vital interest to every person who knows the value of money.

EVERY man woman and child in this section were interested deeply in the freeing of the bridge pictured above. This interest was aroused by the desire to save money, and this spirit of thrift that demanded the freeing of the bridge is the same that has made possible the wonderful growth of the Wright-Metzler establishment. The Wright-Metzler Co. now own and operate the biggest department stores in both Uniontown and Connellsville, making them the biggest retailing merchants in Western Pennsylvania (outside of Pittsburg.) The immense buying power that the operation of these two stores make possible, results in radical savings to the public. There are other important advantages derived in the maintenance of an establishment such as these. We cannot afford to sell any but reputable merchandise. We are bound to present the broadest collections in every department and absolute correctness in style. All of our buyers visit the Eastern markets as often as do those of the Pittsburg stores, thus insuring the newest of style features at all times. We don't tell you all of these things in a vainglorious spirit, but just to impress upon you the reason why this is the logical place to trade. When you cross the Bridge next Tuesday, look up Main street, and towering above all the other business blocks you'll see the First National Bank building, this is the Connellsville home of the Wright-Metzler Co. Only a stones throw from the bridge.
